ALCÂNTARA

From Maritime Roots to Modern Hub

Alcântara, a historic Lisbon neighborhood, reflects the city's evolution from maritime roots to a modern creative hub.

Rua Prior do Crato, formerly Rua do Livramento, is in Prazeres and begins at the Alcântara bridge, ending at Praça do Regimento. It was named for its proximity to the Convent of Our Lady of Deliverance, built in 1679 on the site of a 1606 chapel by Rodrigo Homem de Azevedo. The convent, a site of miracles, was rebuilt after the 1755 earthquake but later demolished for the Caixa Geral de Depósitos bank, with a hidden tombstone commemorating its founder.

In the 18th and 19th centuries, Lisbon adopted Neoclassical architecture, with columns, symmetry, wrought-iron balconies, and ornate facades. Many buildings on this street are from the 19th century. Building Nos. 63 to 75 feature a caravela ship, indicating late 17th-century construction, and No. 77 once had an azulejo panel with Lisbon's coat of arms.

Rua Prior do Crato benefited from Tapada da Ajuda and the populous Alcântara neighborhood, home to maritime workers. Alcântara's history showcases Lisbon's resilience and cultural dynamism, blending heritage with modernity. The renovation of buildings on Prior do Crato honors this rich history while revitalizing the area.

Alcântara, um bairro histórico de Lisboa, reflete a evolução da cidade desde as suas raízes marítimas até se tornar um centro criativo moderno. A Rua Prior do Crato, anteriormente Rua do Livramento, está localizada nos Prazeres e começa na ponte de Alcântara, terminando na Praça do Regimento. Recebeu esse nome pela proximidade ao Convento de Nossa Senhora do Livramento, construído em 1679 no local de uma capela de 1606 por Rodrigo Homem de Azevedo. O convento, um local de milagres, foi reconstruído após o terremoto de 1755, mas mais tarde demolido para dar lugar ao banco Caixa Geral de Depósitos, com uma lápide escondida que comemora o seu fundador.

Nos séculos XVIII e XIX, Lisboa adotou a arquitetura neoclássica, com colunas, simetria, varandas de ferro forjado e fachadas ornamentadas. Muitos edifícios nesta rua são do século XIX. Os edifícios de números 63 a 75 apresentam uma caravela, indicando uma construção do final do século XVII, e o número 77 teve um painel de azulejos com o brasão de Lisboa.

A Rua Prior do Crato beneficiou da proximidade da Tapada da Ajuda e do populoso bairro de Alcântara, habitado principalmente por trabalhadores marítimos. A história de Alcântara demonstra a resiliência e o dinamismo cultural de Lisboa, misturando herança com modernidade. A renovação dos edifícios na Rua Prior do Crato honra essa rica história enquanto revitaliza a área.
